

ELRO at work

Hôpital de Charleville-Mézières

«In terms of functionality, ELRO not only fulfilled, but also surpassed the special expectations of our hospital kitchen.»

Manuel Pommier
Chef de Cuisine
Hôpital de Charleville-Mézières

With a daily output of around 5,000 meals, a kitchen like the one at the Hôpital de Charleville-Mézières (F) has very specific requirements in terms of equipment. Criteria such flexibility, dependability and speed are fundamental in order to handle the great variety of preparation methods, as well as the medically prescribed meals.

In addition to increased efficiency, easy reproducibility of recipes also played an important role in planning the new kitchen facility at Charleville-Mézières, located in the northeast of Paris. In other words, to produce seasonally varied 4-week menu plans with consistent quality with the least possible effort. Another key factor in the selection process was easy operation in daily use.

The ELRO series 2300 was very convincing: After a factory visit to ELRO headquarters in Bremgarten (CH), it was clear to the Chef de cuisine and his two assistant cooks that two pressure bratt pans would cover their specific needs perfectly. The specialists were also impressed with the very short heating-up times of the appliances, another important factor contributing to efficiency in the hospital kitchen.

«We were also impressed by the fact that the ELRO pressure bratt pans can be programmed: For instance, we can prepare our roasts overnight, with no supervisory personnel,» adds Manuel Pommier.
